The small residence on South First street occupied by R. L. Blaine was burned Monday forenoon with all the contents. The Deestrick Skule

There have been numerous cartoons in the papers lately anent the Strap System, and in connection with places of amusement the "S. R. O." sign would mean "Strap Room Only". That would have been the condition at the Coffee Club Friday night when the Grange presented "The Deestrick Skule", as the building was so packed that people were actually suspended from the rafters overhead.

The participants all entered into the spirit of the occasion with real zest and judging by the laughter, certainly succeeded in their efforts to amuse their audience.

It is impossible to pick out any of the "actors" as deserving special mention, but "Little Brother Ezekiel" (F. S. Newcomb), and "Mike O'Flynn" (W. Coupland) were so much in evidence all the time that they appeared to be the "stars". Both made very remarkable infants. Maaster Wiesendanger was always there with the gad as Willie Finemore can testify.

The songs that were sung, the passing of the water, and other incidents of the day, recalled to many a mind scenes of his early years in the "Little Red Schoolhouse".

From both the financial and artistic standpoints the Grangers can congratulate themselves and each other upon their success.

DISHES OF THE SOUTH

POSSIBLY SOMETHING NEW THAT WILL BE WORTH TRYING.

Tamales, Properly Prepared, Make an Appetizing Luncheon Delicacy
—Ravioli, One of Most Popular Italian Compounds.

Tamales.—Boil two chickens until done. While chicken is cooking boil two dozen chili peppers until done, then grind fine. Then take one onion, three eyes of garlic ground fine and five tablespoons of lard, one can of tomatoes, salt and sugar to taste; then take half of the chicken broth and put all together in a very large pan and let all come to a boil; then thicken with flour, stirring all the time. The flour may lump, but it will gradually work out while beating.

Cornmeal Part.—Four cups of meal (white or yellow), half a cup of flour, one level teaspoon of black pepper, three tablespoons of lard, half a teaspoon of soda dissolved in a little warm water; scald all with a pint of chicken broth, and if too thick to spread on slacks thin by adding cold water or cold broth.

Enchiladas.—Take half a pound of long Spanish peppers, wash, take off the stems and put on to boil with enough water to cover them. When they are soft cool and squeeze all the meat out and put the pulp back into the water in which the peppers were cooked, leaving out the skins. Set on the stove again and when it has reached the boiling point add a piece of butter, with salt to taste. Thicken with a little flour mixed with cold water. This is the gravy part.

For the tarts, take two cups of flour, a little salt and just enough warm water to mix. Roll it out as you would pie crust and as thin as you can. On the stove have a hot griddle, also a large frying pan filled with hot fat. Lay the tarts on the griddle for just a second, then put into the hot lard and fry to a light brown. Put on a warm plate and when you have them all finished fill with the mixture, dip in the gravy and bake.

Now the Filling.—Cut up one dozen hard boiled eggs in slices and put them in a dish; fry two good-sized onions in a little salad oil, or lard if you prefer, but do not let them brown. Take half a pound of eastern cheese cut in small bits; mix eggs, cheese and onions, adding enough of the red pepper gravy to hold together, salting to taste. Dip the tarts in the red gravy and put in a baking pan; fill with the egg mixture and fold the tarts over it as you would make a turnover. When all are in the pan grate more cheese on top of the enchiladas, fill the pan with the gravy and bake five or ten minutes. Serve hot.

Ravioli Recipe.—For the paste sift one quart of flour with a teaspoon of salt and drop into the flour one or two eggs with a little water. Knead well and roll out thin. For the filling take four eggs and beat well. Mix in a saucer of grated parmesan cheese, 5 cents' worth of spinach, boiled, drained and chopped fine; 10 cents' worth of sausage meat fried and chopped fine, 10 cents' worth of brains, also boiled and chopped fine; a little sweet oil, salt and pepper, a few chili peppers, a clove of garlic and a little sweet marjoram, all chopped and mixed together. Then take a tablespoonful at a time and lay on the dough, covering with another thin strip of paste; press together and cut into inch squares with a ravioli cutter.

Corn and Tomato With Cheese.
Cook a sliced onion for five minutes in a tablespoonful of butter; remove the onion, put in a heaping cupful of grated cheese, and stir until this is melted. Have ready a cupful of drained and chopped canned corn and half a cupful of thick stewed tomato, free from lumps and sweetened with a teaspoonful of white sugar. Put this with the cheese, stir well, and when all are heated, add slowly the beaten yolks of two eggs. Cook one minute, season with a teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of cayenne, and serve on buttered toast.

Grandma's Pumpkin Pie.
Mix one cup each of milk and dry steamed pumpkin, half a cup of sugar, two tablespoons each of molasses and melted butter, one tablespoon of ginger, two eggs slightly beaten, one teaspoon of cinnamon, half a teaspoon of salt. Pour into a pastry lined dish and bake about 45 minutes. When baking cake dust the greased pan with flour and the cake will never stick.

When making custard pie sprinkle your spice on the pastry lined pan and you will not find it on top.

Wax of Candles.
If the wax from the candles runs down to the candlestick itself it is difficult to clean off, especially if the candlestick is metal. As a simple way to do this as any is to set candlesticks in the oven, letting rest on many thicknesses of newspaper; the heat melts the wax, and the paper will absorb it all. When the wax is quite melted, wipe off with fresh newspaper before trying to polish the candlesticks.

Three Fascinating Frocks Designed for the Really Smart Dresser

1. The new tunic in blue Liberty satin with panels of brocade, skirt edged with black fox. 2. A harmony in black velvet and white tulle, edged here and there with white fox. 3. A graceful frock in biscuit cloth with collar, sleeve revers and sash in ermine. A small red tie supplies the inevitable bright touch.

JEWEL CASE AND PINCUSHION

Double Convenience for the Woman Who Is Required to Do Considerable Travelling.

One of the most convenient little accessories to the toilet for the woman who travels about a great deal is a small jewel case and pincushion combined.

It is made of a piece of fancy ribbon or plain satin twelve inches long and six inches wide. The material is sewed together lengthwise, then divided into three parts, four inches in each, either by stitching it on the machine or with very close cross-stitch or featherstitching.

Do this stitching four inches from one side first, then fill the center with wool to form the cushion in which to stick the pins, then stitch it across four inches from the other end.

There you have a solid center with hollow end, and these ends are turned in to form a hem one inch wide. In these a small casing is run, with narrow ribbon placed through that so as to pull it up like a little bag on each end.

This makes a flat cushion in the center, having baglike ends in which the jewelry is kept, brooches, bracelets, rings, chains and the watch, when it is not in use. The cushion can be decorated with some pretty design done in cross-stitch or an embroidered initial or a small spray of flowers.

Such a case can be made of any material you may choose. Brocade satin is always pretty; plain satin covered with lace or coarse linen that can be laundered will be found a satisfactory substitute for other more expensive fabrics.

One side of the cushion may be used for jewels and the other for sewing materials—cotton, scissors, needles, etc.—or for a soft ball of darning cotton, that is always handy to have when travelling.

This combination cushion and case will make a splendid gift for the young girl who is attending boarding school or for one away from home.

FEATHER-TRIMMED CHAPEAU.

This hat is composed of violet velvet, the brim being deeper over the back of the neck, and is trimmed with a plume of ostrich feathers drooping over the left side.

Silk Lace Scarfs.
Silk Spanish lace scarfs, dyed to match the gown, are in favor for evening use. Some of the handsomest scarfs at present are made of a fine crepe de chine with insets of embroidered voile in the border design. One very lovely one shown by a Chestnut street importer is of a beautiful rose color, handsomely embroidered, with exquisite roses also embroidered on the large voile insets. In all the decoration the finest graduations of rose color melting into white were used.

BEST SCENTS FOR THE BATH

Much Choice Is Possible, and a Woman May Use Any Particular Perfume Which She May Prefer.

The commonest form of the bath as a beautifier is the bran bath. This particular bath has the advantage of being inexpensive and efficient at the same time. The bran should be sewn into a neat little square sack of cheesecloth covering, and dropped into the bath when the water is run in. The water must not be too hot, or the bran will be cooked and thus rendered useless, but if warm water is poured on it a creamy mass is formed, which will render the skin delightfully soft. For those who wish to be a little more elaborate there are sold at chemists and stores little sacks of bran mixed with various perfumed herbs, according to taste, such as violets, orris root and sunflower seed.

The milk bath is not unusual, and is claimed that it has no rival in beautifying the skin. One well known beauty in Paris is understood to use milk for her bath always, and the skin of her throat and shoulders is as creamy white as the liquid she is supposed to bathe them with. Of course, one would not actually get right into a milk bath as one does with water. The milk is applied on wads of antiseptic cotton. Then, to prevent any stickiness, it is rubbed gently with eau de cologne.

French women are also very partial to the use of alcohol in the bath. It is perfumed in some way with such scents as lavender or violet, and those who indulge in these baths or the bran ones use soap only once or twice a week.

Sea bathing is probably the most bracing and the best form for the robust, but in a climate such as ours it cannot be recommended except in the hot months, unless the bather is very strong. Those who are unfortunate enough to possess very irritable skins will do well to eschew sea baths altogether.

For ordinary bathing purposes most people use ammonia or borax, which not only softens the water, but is invaluable for cleaning the skin. It is necessary, however, to exercise caution in the use of these two articles, for an overdose in the bath, instead of making the skin soft and supple, will harden it and make it much too dry.

Dark Furs Becoming.

It seems odd that so few should realize that dark furs are much more becoming than light, that is, to the average woman. Sable, mink, black fox, make her complexion look at its very best, whereas ermine, white fox, miniver and squirrel have exactly the contrary effect.

The newest way of wearing the stole is to put the middle of it on in front, pass the ends over the shoulders, crossing them at the back and bringing them forward under the arms. Even fur capes with their rounded or pointed back are worn in this fashion, certainly very warm and comfortable, though slightly unorthodox.

Tray Tables.

The Tripoli tray table is a thing of parts—three in number. There is a large top tray, a small tray (which fits on supports a third way up the legs of the stand) and the folding stand. When not in use this four-legged stand may be folded and stowed away in a small space. The trays are made of bamboo, and are strong yet light in weight, and can be easily washed. This table would be very ornamental for a tea or refreshment table in a bachelor maid's den.

SKATING

With Hobey Baker, Princeton's wonderful football back, occupying his accustomed role of conquering hero, the Tiger hockey team smothered the Williams College septet at St. Nicholas rink, 14 to 1.

POLO

Official announcement is made by the Polo Association that the first match for the international cup will be played on Tuesday, June 10, 1913, the second on Saturday, June 14, and a third contest, if necessary, on a date to be arranged later.

SWIMMING

In the most thrilling and spectacular mid-winter aquatic event ever held on the Pacific coast, and possibly in the world, John McMurray, a stripling of 20, won the annual Christmas day 100 yard swim in the Willamette river at Portland in the remarkable time of :55 1-5, setting a new world's amateur mark.

BOWLING

It was asserted in the New York Supreme court on the hearing of an application on the part of the Corinthian Bowling club of Brooklyn for an injunction to restrain the New York Bowling association from expelling the club from membership in the general organization, that Billy Hein, the star bowler, had used a loaded ball in the 1912 tournament.

WRESTLING

Harry Ordemann, heavyweight wrestler, defeated "Hercules" Johnson in straight falls at Minneapolis, winning the first in 1 1/2 minutes and the second in 9 1/2.

George Lurien, one of the greatest of all the European wrestlers, is in Chicago prepared to meet any of the heavy fellows now in this country.

Constant Lemarin won two falls out of three at Ottawa, Ont., in a wrestling match against Dr. Roller of Seattle. It was mixed style. Roller won the first fall, catch-as-catch-can, and the Belgian took the next two, Graeco Roman style.

GOLF

There is every possibility that another notable invasion of English golf by American cranks will take place this winter, the matter having been broached by Douglass, the metropolitan champion. Among those who may cross the water are Herreschoff, Byers, Kirby, Fownes, Perrin, Wittemore, Watson and Ward.

If the opinion of an official of the Metropolitan Association is to be valued, Jerome Travers, the greatest comeback of going history, will be the only player rated at scratch on the association 1913 handicap, despite the fact that Travis, Kirby, Herreschoff, and Secler all receive that rating now.

FOOTBALL

Cornell football players at a banquet elected James J. Munns captain of the 1913 team. Munns played left guard during the last season and is a Junior. He was the only Cornellian mentioned by some writers for the all-American team. His home is in Pittsburgh.

Bill Roper, former Princeton head coach and chief adviser to the present football official, will recommend that the football rules be changed to make the attack still stronger. The inside kick, he believes, should be restored, and the forward pass should be restricted, with the exception that it be from behind the line of scrimmage.

PUGILISM

Joe Thomas, the California middleweight, handed Willie Grupp, a St. Louis boxer, a beating in a ten a ten-round bout at the New Orleans Polo A. C.

George Cheney of Baltimore stopped Babe Davis of New York in the second round at the Fairmont A. C. The referee stopped the bout to save Davis from further punishment.

Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland, featherweight champion, and Johnny Dundee of New York has been matched to fight 20 rounds for the featherweight title at the Vernon arena, where Kilbane won the championship from Abe Attel. The fight will take place in April.

BASEBALL

All members of the Boston Red Sox team will be presented with beautiful gold watch fobs by the Boston management.

Honus Wagner has joined the McKeesport basketball team, and the fans of the local city have planned a reception for him.

Some baseball scribe has dared to come out with a story saying that Beals Becker would be sold to Indianapolis next season.

The Montreal club, it is said, will pass up the Virginia training camp next spring and go farther south. Perhaps to Wilmington, N. C.

CAPTAIN PENDLETON

Considered to Be the Best All-Round Athlete at Princeton.

TENNIS

Abolition of the rating of tennis players in the United States is being considered by the officials of the United States National Lawn Tennis association, which will hold its annual meeting. It is declared the rating committee finds the work too great a task because players fail to co-operate by sending in the data required for the ratings.

George Standing, champion racquet player of the world, retired from competition, according to announcement at the Racquet and Tennis club, where he is instructor. With the exception of Tom Pettit of Boston, Standing is the oldest racquet and court tennis player in the United States.

AQUATIC

The board of the Schuylkill Navy has decided to make application to the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen for next year's national regatta, to be held on the Schuylkill river.

Yale has again changed head crew coaches in midseason. Captain Snowden naming Averill Harriman, son of the late Edward Harriman, to that position, and announcing the resignation of James Otis Rodgers, who was named head coach this fall. Rodgers was also selected for head coach last year, but gave way to the veteran Bob Cook after the Ell crew arrived in their training quarters at New London. Harriman has been made chief of the coaching staff because of his investigation of English methods and styles of rowing during his visit to that country last February. He was then freshman crew coach, his eight proving the only Yale crew that defeated Harvard on the Thames last June.

HORSE RACING

In deciding that Anna Axme is a three-year-old, and was eligible to the futurities which she won, the National Trotting association board says that a horse's age cannot be told by the teeth.

John R. Gentry, the famous pacer, twice holder of the world's record and sire of sixty-four turf winners, was taken to Tennessee from New York on a special car to spend the last days of his life there.

The Abbe, 2:04, will be given a great opportunity in his new home in Tennessee, where he will be mated with the choicest of the Hal mares. That a great pacer will come from him there is little doubt; also he is apt to get a lot of speed at the trot. At W. H. Phaelin's Horse Bazaar, Oriole, Md., 26 head of horses and mules were sold at fair prices. In the lot were Somerset Boy (5), by Cooper Hannis, a half brother of Alice Mc-trial, 2:14 1/4 pacing, for $955, to William Darrack, of Whalleyville, Md.

MISCELLANEOUS

The University of Pennsylvania cricket team may again invade England.

Detroit Athletic club is to build a new ten-story club house costing $750,000.

The French Automobile club has decided to hold the Grand Prix race in 1913 in the neighborhood of Amiens.

Canadian Amateur Lacrosse association, formed the other day, is to be the governing body of Canada's national game.

James A. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the National Amateur Athletic union, will be director of athletic sports at the carnival which will be a feature of the opening of the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915 at San Francisco.

FARM and GARDEN

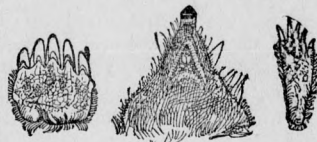

MOLE WORKS DURING WINTER

Little Animal Keeps Busy Where Ground Is Not Frozen Too Hard—His Strength Is Marvelous.

(By T. H. SCHEFFER.)

The mole, like the pocket gopher, is more or less active at all seasons of the year, but it is during the rainy period, when the soil is moist, that his work is pushed most vigorously. Shallow runways are then rapidly extended in all directions and old runways repaired.

When a mole makes up its mind to go in a certain direction, nothing but concrete or stone will stop him.

Hand, Foot and Nose of Common Mole.

The strength of these little animals is marvelous. They will heave up the surface of a path trodden so hard that repeated blows of a pick will be needed to break the crust.

Ordinarily the mole makes his way through the soil as a root does, or a stake when driven by the blows of a sledge. The earth is not excavated, but simply crowded aside. When the ground becomes very hard, of course, the mole is obliged to excavate the passageways and push the loose dirt out through the openings of the roof of his tunnel.

The mole keeps at work all through the winter in places where the ground is not frozen too hard. He works more frequently in the morning and evening.

Moles do very little harm to the roots of grain, grasses or vegetables, except in pushing the soil aside, and they live principally on the white grub, earth-worms and beetles.

He thus proves himself to be a friend to mankind, because grubs are the greatest scourges of grass and other valuable plant roots.

VALUE OF THE DRILL SYSTEM

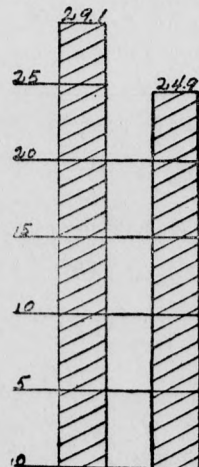

Question Most Frequent in Discussions on Wheat Raising Is Answered by Many Farmers.

(By L. C. BURNETT.)

The value of the drill is the question most frequent in discussions on wheat raising. The results of four years' tests in Iowa are found to be 4.2 bushels of winter wheat gain per acre when the grain was drilled, over that which was broadcasted. This, figured at 70 cents per bushel, the average price of wheat for the time covered by the experiment, shows a balance of $2.95 per acre in favor of drilling.

The opinion of farmers in all parts of the country seems to be about the same, when it comes to the value of the drill.

Edward Lefot of Minnesota says: "Five pecks per acre is the usual quantity sown when the wheat is drilled, and six pecks broadcast. Experiments seem to indicate that a larger quantity of seed does not increase the yield. I prefer drilling to broadcasting, mainly because it places the seed where each kernel will germinate at once and there is absolutely no waste of seed."

A Pennsylvania farmer says: "Drilling proves best here."

In Virginia, 30 bushels per acre has been and is being harvested each year from broadcasted seed.

In Kentucky drilling is said to have given far better results than broadcasting.

A Missouri farmer writes: "I prefer the drill, as it distributes the seed more uniformly."

From North Carolina a farmer writes: "If the seed is evenly distributed we think broadcasting best in the south, as it keeps down all other vegetation."

Accommodating.

Mr. Levi is a kind-hearted, conscien- tious man, an example of what Maeterlinck calls "our anxious morality." But he is also German, and spends the pennies hard. He has a hired man who says, "Mr. Levi's queer; he wants me to work all the time he has me hired for." Mr. Levi also has a young horse that balks.

The other day the horse stopped in the midst of a furrow, with weeks of work ahead.

"If you would just let me take a whip to him once!" the hired man expostulated, exasperated and yet dominated by the other's point of view.

Mr. Levi looked around him un- easily; stood first on one foot, then on the other. "Ain't there nothin' else you could be doin'?" he asked, "till he gets ready to start?"—Harper's Maga- zine.

Salad Secret.

My friends all flatter me on my ex- cellent potato salad, says a contribu- tor to the Modern Priscilla. I claim this is due to a little invention of my own. Before adding the usual vin-egar or mayonnaise dressing I make a thin paste of one and one-half table- spoonfuls of flour and a cup of boil- ing water. Put this over the potatoes. This makes them smooth and solid after the dressing is added.

MONASTIR WAS A CITADEL OF ISLAM

TURKISH CITIZEN PLAYING MONASTIR.

THE FALL of the Turkish stronghold of Monastir, in Macedonia, came with all the force that the news of the fall of Constantinople itself might have brought with it. Quaint, curious Monastir has a temptation for the traveler. Turkish baths, oriental dancing girls, booths, bazars, hookahs and nargilehs, the almost incredible mixture of races and the constant possi- bility of arrest as a spy were not the least among its varied attractions under Turkish domination.

The Salonica express, which most travelers take, for safety sake if for no other reason, reaches Monastir at 5:15 in the evening. A crowd of the usual Turkish hacks gathers around the depot, where a motley assemblage of porters and spectators awaits the arrival of the train. These porters and baggage men have an unpleasant habit of jostling that reminds one of the wedgemens of the Bowery and it is no little risk to depend on one of the wretched hacks for conveyance to the distant hotel.

The best inn in old Monastir is the Hotel Belgrad, where the rooms are neat, clean and inexpensive. Each room is provided with a couple of iron beds, single chambers being an unobtainable luxury. In a corner there is a closet, with a divan before it. On the walls, next the beds, Turkish rugs are hung, lest one roll over against the cold wall, and over the beds there are canopies as in France. Cold, hungry and tired, after a long, tedious ride, one is not disposed to be critical, espe- cially as the system of cheating prac- ticed everywhere in the Balkans has been a valuable preparation for a patient frame of mind.

Where East Meets West.

The little dining room is lined with pictures of all rulers except the sul- tan. His presentment is seldom en- countered. There's a merry company of foreign consuls, with their wives, at tea time, but even the most ex- clusive of these dames adopt Turkish manners and pick their teeth through- out the meal. Soup, fish, meat, fowl, pudding and coffee form a satisfying earnest of future treatment. Before it is served, however, the hotelier col- lects the teskeret, or internal pas- ports, for police scrutiny, and until its return the guest is presumed to stay in the hotel. Early retirement to a cold bed chamber and damp bed somewhat detracts from the pleasant feeling induced by a good supper.

After an early breakfast the visitor takes his way through cobbled streets, flanked by two-story, plaster-coated houses, most of them with the second story overhanging the street and painted to match the red roof of terra cotta. Through the main street a creek runs, helter-skelter, shaded by some forlorn-looking trees.

After taking the precaution to leave a card at the consulate of his nation the visitor proceeds with his sight-seeing through the inordinately long, cob- bled streets. Many of the houses are harems and so the lower half of the windows have a brown or white lattice of intricately beautiful design across the outside that the hours may look out and yet not be seen themselves. Additional protection is given by strong iron bars outside the lattice work.

Mysterious gardens, from which pro- ceed sounds of laughter and female voices, are hidden from view by thick walls of rock in which they have cut wooden doors with fantastic iron knockers. Children play on the ex- tremely narrow sidewalks. The boys wear girlish dresses; the girls are clothed in bloomers.

The streets are muddy and every- where refuse, garbage, even sewage, is thrown directly into them. Hundreds of mongrel dogs and a few cats ap- pear, as if by magic, the instant any- thing is dumped in the open and soon everything eatable is gobbled up. Let a dog of another neighborhood invade a street and at once all the vested in- terests set up a howl that is startling to the stranger. These dogs are the scavengers of the Turkish streets. Some are quite as fierce as wolves.

Umbrellas Always Open.

Turkish women wander up and down, wearing handsome dresses of black silk. The heavily puffed silk waists match the deep black veils that completely cover the face. Sometimes the veil-front is varied by a pattern suggestive of a yellow night moth. Most of these women carry umbrellas, open in all kinds of weather. Younger women are garbed in white.

Husband and wife are never seen together on the highway. Oftener it is two or three women together, wives of the one man, with their children. Quaint-looking Turks in fezes stroll about. Older men adopt a long blue cloak, which is drawn aside to reveal a red girdle, much the hue of the tur- ban. Some wear a peculiar green tur- ban, signifying that they have been to Mecca.

Before departure for Mecca there are extensive rites; a man must pay all debts, divorce his wives, and re- ceive a certificate of good standing from his mosque. On returning from the pilgrimage his wives, as a rule, remarry him and he receives the hon- orary title of Hadji for life. Chris- tian woman, unveiled all, are met, wearing European attire, save for a blue coil on the head. Women of the peasant class affect gay skirts of red, highly embroidered, a white waist and a much decorated jerkin, together with bracelets and braids, and, along the leg, queer leather strappings.

The bazars are not numerous, but are most interesting. In some the wool-beaters still ply their primitive bow. In others, public ovens turn out loaves for the multitude. Some handle candy, others are cafes.

Monastir is possessed of many mosques, and next to them are the cemeteries, sadly neglected and over- run with pariah dogs. Some of the graves are guarded by iron railings. Most of them have a circular head- stone and footstone, covered with Arabic inscriptions, or an oblong wooden tablet, painted in yellow and blue.

Many Greek Christians are encoun- tered, in ordinary European dress, save for a fez, worn somewhat lower on the head than the Turk wears it and having down the rear from the center of the crown a bunch of blue cording. Street fountains, the prime source of water supply, are found everywhere.

Again and again trains of pack mules go by, great bundles upon their backs and unwieldy bison, hitched to wagons, add to the general din.

Mighty mountains, long since defor- ested, but well tilled, affording secure harborage for the ubiquitous brigand, encompass the city on every side. On the outskirts there are still other mosques. A bugle sounds, too, from a huge barracks. Children come by, all of them smoking. Peddlers are crying their wares outside the harem walls.

Police duties are performed by sol- diers and it is wise to refrain from note taking or photography while any of them are in the vicinity. Other- wise, it means an unwelcome stay in the crowded city prison until a con- sulate identification and explanation procures release.

GOOD JOKE ON "CANNY ANDY"

Irreverent Wit Made Mirth of Subject That Carnegie Always Considers Most Solemn.

When Andrew Carnegie was still on the sunny side of forty, he was dining with some half dozen well known business men in a hotel in New York. After dinner, amid a fire of jokes and personalities, a voice from the foot of the table called out solemnly:

"Andrew, if you were to die now, what would they sing at your funeral?"

"Let me see," said Mr. Carnegie, thoughtfully, "I once heard a piece called, 'Angels Ever Bright and Fair,' that struck me as mighty pretty. How would that fill the bill?"

"Guess again, Andrew. Nothing like that in yours."

"Well, I give up," said Mr. Carnegie in a resigned tone, "that's what you want me to do anyhow. What's it to be?"

Quick as a flash, amid the silence that for the first time that evening reigned in the room, came the an- swer.

"Scotland's Burning!"

Reminder.

When George W. Perkins goes in for helping the workers and when Andrew Carnegie goes in for reduc- ing the tariff I think of my old friend Lobb.

The speaker was Samuel Compers. He continued:

"Lobb was entertaining me in his library one evening. He said:

"Sam, my boy, never lend your books." Then, waving his hand to- ward a particularly handsome shelf, he added: "Do you see those volumes? Well, every one of them was lent to me."

RECIPES IN MIXTURES

SOMETHING HERE TO SUIT ALL VARIETIES OF TASTE.

Marshmallow May Always Be Em- ployed When a Sweet Confection Is Desired—Some Advice as to Its Use.

Dressing.—Warm about half a gal- lon of simple sirup and beat in one 25-cent package of marshmallows. This can be made into many styles, using chopped nuts and fresh fruits to mix in the dressing.

Dressing No. 2.—Put the contents of 10-cent package of marshmallows in a double boiler and let dissolve over a moderate fire. Take half pint of gran- ulated sugar and three tablespoons of boiling water, cook until it threads from the spoon, beat slowly into the white of two eggs, then add the marshmallows while the frosting is hot.

Frosting.—Boil three-quarters of a cup of granulated sugar and one fourth of a cup of milk without stir- ring for six minutes or until the sirup threads. Cook and stir one 10-cent package of marshmallows and two tablespoons of water until smooth. Put the two mixtures together and beat until thick enough to spread, after flavoring to state.

Dessert.—Lay slices of angel food cake on small place. Spread over these a mixture made of one 25-cent package of marshmallows, put into a little and and set over a slow fire to melt. Whip cream, to which add vanilla to suit taste. Spread this on marshmallows and then another layer of cake and marshmallows and finish with cream. Set aside for one hour before serving.

Lemon Dessert.—Dissolve one pack- age lemon flavor gelatine in one pint of boiling water. Just as it begins to stiffen drop contents of one 10-cent package of marshmallows into the gelatine. Pour into a mold and when firm decorate with marshmallows and serve with whipped cream.

Combination Dessert.—Take one ten-cent package, one cup of pineap- ple, half a cup of walnuts (chopped), one cup cream (whipped). Mix pine- apple, walnuts and marshmallows to- gether and add whipped cream.

Orange Dessert.—Cut contents of 10- cent package of marshmallows in quarters with scissors. Soak in juice three oranges two hours, then add whipped cream at top.

Delight.—Cut up one 25-cent pack- age of marshmallows. Whip half a pint of cream, chop one cup English walnut meats, or put in candied cher- ries. Flavor with rum. Mix marsh- mallows and nuts or the cherries. Pour over them beaten cream. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Scalloped Cabbage With Meat.

Boil a head of cabbage in two wa- ters, and when you cook cabbage al- ways leave the pot uncovered and have standing near it on the stove a cup of vinegar. Drain the cabbage, let it cool and chop it fine. Butter a pudding dish and strew it with fine crumbs. On this put a layer of minced cabbage seasoned with salt and pep- per; dot it with bits of butter, then put on more crumbs and a layer of chopped corned beef. You may use ham, but in this case omit the salt from the layers of cabbage. Continue in this way until your dish is full. Pour in a cupful of this liquor, in which your corned beef was boiled, strew crumbs on the top, and over this grated cheese, bake, covered for half an hour, uncover and brown. Serve in the dish in which it was cooked.

Buttermilk Cakes.

One quart of buttermilk, one level teaspoonful of salt, two eggs, flour to make a thin batter and one teaspoon- ful of baking soda. Beat up the eggs well, add to them the buttermilk, then add the salt and mix thoroughly. Dis- solve the soda in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, then stir it into the buttermilk. Now gradually add the flour, stirring all the time, until you have a batter that will pour smoothly from a spoon. Give a good beating and bake quickly on a hot, well- greased griddle.

Standard Sponge Cake.

The following is the ordinarily standard sponge cake, and needs no baking powder to raise. Add one cup of fine granulated sugar. Beat again. Add the juice and grated rind of one lemon and beat again. Add the stiffly beaten whites of five eggs and beat once more. Fold in slowly one cup of flour sifted three times. Bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Do not open the oven door for 15 minutes after putting the cake in.

Three-Egg Cake.

One cup sugar, one-half cup butter beaten to a cream, whites of three eggs beaten to a froth, one-half cup sweet milk, one teaspoon baking pow- der; flavor with lemon and two cups of flour.

Frosting.—Beat the yolks of two eggs with two teaspoons of sugar, and while the cake is hot and in the pan put on the frosting and put in damp place.

Kicking Habit of Mule.

If a mule is properly trained he will not develop the kicking habit any more than a horse will. Mules have a bad name on this score simply be- cause they are not as well broken as horses are.

GERMAN ARMY READY

Magnificent Force Awaits the One Word, "Mobilize!"

Nearly Four Million Trained Soldiers Would Be Put in Simultaneous Motion When in Time of Peril the Kaiser Orders.

Mobilization! Red proclamations appear at every street corner, post- office, railway station and crossroads throughout Germany. The telegraph carries the word to distant corners of the empire. Messengers afoot, on bicycles and in motor cars dash through the streets. Couriers gallop along country roads. The wheels of factories and mills stop with a jerk. Every industry and peaceful vocation is affected.

Rolls of drums, the clarion notes of bugles and waving flags; cheers ming- ling with weeping and sobbing from almost every home, as a nation's mothers, wives and children bid fare- well to husbands, sons and brothers.

A forest of bayonets begins to move. Endless lines of cannon and munition wagons rumble along. That the sol- dier may be strong, sentiment is ruth- lessly crushed. That the sight of weeping loved ones whom he may never see again shall not dishearten him, a cordon of police surrounds the railway station. To the uninitiated everything is confusion; only the trained one sees the wheels of a vast machine that works almost without a hitch.

The word "mobilization." It has the greatest "thrill" of any word in the German or French language.

Each Knows Where to Go.

In Germany only the emperor can write that word officially, and by it is Germany's peace force of 600,000 men turned into an army of more than four million. Every one of the three and a half million "ex-soldiers" is in- structed twice yearly as to the day, hour and place he must report imme- diately upon learning that "mobiliza- tion" has been ordered. Every owner of a motor car, duly registered with the military authorities, has orders when, where and at what hour he must turn it over for military pur- poses, with a full set of extra tires, specified quantity of gasoline, oil and repair kit. Every sound horse is re- gistered and subject to call for mili- tary purposes and its owner knows where and when he must bring it.

When Count Von Moltke, the chief of the German general staff, nephew of the great strategist of 1870, re- ceives from the kaiser through the minister of war the order to mobilize he opens one of the famous "sealed envelopes" in the guarded steel vaults of the general staff headquarters, con- taining the mobilization plans for war with every nation or alliance. The proclamation is brief. The calendar ceases to exist; everything military is dated first, second, third day of mobilization.

Three days to Move a Corps.

Germany has twenty-six army corps in the first line and sixteen in the sec- ond and third lines. Each corps con- sists of 41,000 men and 14,000 horses. In single marching column a corps is thirty-five miles long. It takes 125 railroad trains to move such a divi- sion. The military schedule calls for a train starting every thirty minutes and for forty-eight trains in opposite directions every twenty-four hours on a double-track line. That is the max- imum. Generally it is estimated that only forty trains will be run every twenty-four hours. It would therefore take three days to move an army corps upon such a line. The average running time, inclusive of stops, calls for seventeen miles an hour.

Cremation in Germany.

Berlin recently opened its first cre- matorium. The building is the second of its kind in Prussia, and its prede- cessor was completed only a couple of months ago. As a matter of fact, cre- mation is thought to be a question- able proceeding by a large part of the population, as the regulations as to the formalities exacted before permis- sion for cremation clearly testify. In Prussia a man may be cremated only if he states it as his emphatic wish in his will, or when he signs a separate statement attested by a commissioner of oaths. The first cremation in the Berlin crematorium took place only a short time ago, and the occasion was taken to point out in the press that incineration is a cheap and be- coming ceremony. The fee is $12.50, and the cost of a shelf for the urn is only $5, which is much cheaper than the rental of a grave in any public cemetery.

Before Houses Were Numbered.

Four hundred years ago the idea of numbering houses originated in Paris, though it was not until 1789 that the system became general. The first known instance of a London street in which houses were numbered is Pres- cott street, but the practice did not spread far until 1764.

Not an Effective Branch.

The learned counsel was endeavor- ing to impress the court with the fact that his client had always been anx- ious to settle. "My lord," he said, impressively, "only eighteen months ago we held out the olive branch." "Yes," responded the witty judge, "but there were no olives on it."

FIVE SPLENDID SALADS

MAY PROPERLY BE SERVED AT DINNER OR LUNCHEON.

Combination of Prunes and Pecan Nuts Is a Favorite—With Apples and Dates—Nut Stuffing for Tomatoes.

Delicious salads to serve with roast meats or at a luncheon of bread and butter:

Prune and Pecan Nut Salad—Soak a quarter of a pound of prunes over night in cold water, then cook on the back part of the stove until tender, no longer; the water should be evap- orated by that time. When cold, cut from the stones in lengthwise pieces. Cut pecan meats in slices and mix with olive oil and lemon juice, salt and red pepper. Turn over lettuce and serve.

Apple and Date Salad—Peel and core three choice apples and cut them in match-like pieces; there should be about a pint. Squeeze the juice of half a lemon over the apple. Pour boiling water over half a pound of dates, skim out and dry in the oven. When cold, cut each date in four pieces, rejecting the stones; sprinkle with a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and four tablespoonfuls of olive oil. Mix the apple and date and set aside in a cool place for an hour. When ready to serve add more oil and lemon juice if the mixture seems dry. Serve in a bowl lined with blanched heart leaves of lettuce.

Pineapple Salad—Shred one pine- apple, add half the amount of white grapes skinned and seeded, an equal quantity of celery cut in small pieces and half a cup of Brazil nuts peeled and sliced in small pieces. Moisten with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce leaves garnished with cherries.

Oranges peeled and sliced placed on a bed of crisp watercress and served with French dressing is a most de- lectable salad to serve with a duck dinner.

Tomato and Nut Salad—Scoop out the centers of a half dozen tomatoes; to the drained pulp add equal amount of chopped walnuts and a fourth of a cup of chopped green peppers. Serve with mayonnaise dressing. Fill the shells and garnish with mayonnaise.

Beef Pie.

Cut remnants of cold roast beef in one-inch cubes. Cover with boiling water, add one-half onion and cook slowly one hour. Remove onion, thicken gravy with flour, diluted with cold water, and season with salt and pepper. Add potatoes cut in quarter- inch slices, which have been parboil- ed eight minutes in boiling salted wa- ter. Put in a buttered pudding dish, cool, cover with baking powder bis- cuit mixture or pie crust. Bake in a hot oven. If covered with pie crust make several incisions in crust that gases may escape. You can buy a piece of stew meat and cook for pie, but this is a good way to use left over beef.

Importance of Play.

To the decree that mankind shall work for its daily bread, is added the decree that mankind shall play, for the salvation of both its body and soul—a decree so inwrought in the very constitution of man that there is no greater danger to mankind, especially in its state of childhood, than the prevention or misdirection of play, —Richard Watson Glider.

WANTED: A larger Grammar School at Campbell. Campbell in the past year has outgrown the present building and each term finds pupils more crowded and hampered. In one room it is almost impossible for the pupils to march with the teacher and visitors present so little space is left about the room. Agriculture, cooking and sewing departments are new branches that are being demanded in modern schools and there is no place for these in the present building. Also an auditorium or assembly hall is needed there where all the classes and their friends may attend any school exercises or public function of the district. Such a building as would accommodate these departments and the manual training school which is already established cannot be considered as anything but a necessity and the sooner the voters of the district see the light the better. The members of the school board are alive to the fact and wish an expression from the patrons. Visit the school and know the conditions and needs. These new departments which have been added to many of the present day schools must be added to ours if we wish to give our children an equal advantage with others. The Mendels' Interesting Trip to England

The paper read before the Country Woman's Club by Mrs. Thos. Mendel describing her trip to England was most interesting and instructive. The principal points of interest in the states on the route were described but the trip from New York on is given.

We left New York by the steamship Baltic on April 11th. The S. S. Carpathia sailed for the Mediterranean, and the S. S. Amerika for Hamburg, at the same hour. The Amerika was a faster boat than the Baltic and passed us early. We in our turn passed the Carpathia as she was a slower boat than the Baltic. We had a happy jolly crowd on board, also a very cosmopolitan one. We had two people from Egypt, one from West Africa, two from France, one from Australia, quite a number of Canadians, one lady going to India, and 2 Honeymoon couples.

On the day of the 14th we received a wireless message from the Amerika warning us of icebergs, we passed it on to the Titanic, and later on we got a wireless message to the effect that the Titanic had collided with an iceberg and required assistance, we were then 200 miles east of them. We immediately turned back and sailed at top speed towards them. After sailing for 10 hours we received another message to say she had sunk and that the Carpathia would be able to take care of all the survivors, we then turned around again and sailed for Liverpool. In the meantime every preparation had been made on board the Baltic to receive the survivors; life boats were made ready for launching, beds made ready with hot water bottles, etc., food cooked, and the ladies were busy sorting their clothes to give them, it was a great disappointment to everybody not being able to render any help. A few hours later one of the passengers, an old man died from heart failure due to the shock caused by the sad news. We had the painful duty to perform of burying him at sea.

It is customary to wait until midnight, an English clergyman who was on board conducted the service, and instead of committing the body to the ground they slid it down a gang plank into the sea.

We held a service of prayer and Thanksgiving. Prayers for the survivors of the Titanic who were bereft of their friends and relatives, and Thanksgiving that we ourselves had been brought safely through the perilous places. We took up a collection at this service for the relatives of the crew of the Titanic, which amounted to $150. We had previously planned to hold a concert this night, which was postponed until two nights before arriving in Liverpool, and was very enjoyable.

We had quite a number of passengers for Queenstown, Ireland, which is the first calling place. We arrived there at midnight, we all stayed up to see the passengers leave the ship.

The boat slowed down, sent up 3 rocket signals for the Tender, and receiving no reply, passed on to Liverpool. We afterwards learned that they had orders to do this, as there were reporters from all over England, awaiting direct news of the Titanic disaster. There was a tremendous crowd on the landing stage at Liverpool when our boat steamed up the river, as we were the first boat to arrive with direct news of the disaster.

We were now only thirty miles from Bolton, our home town, and a fast train took us there in forty-five minutes. The next day we were besieged by reporters for news of the Titanic, which my husband gave them for the newspapers.

Bolton is a town with a population of 180,000. It is a manufacturing town with chiefly large modern cotton mills and engineering works.

The city of Manchester is 10 1/2 miles south of Bolton, with a population of half a million, and is the next city in size and importance in England to London. It is a wonderful business centre, within a thirty miles radius of this city there is a population of 6 millions, almost entirely industrial.

Thirty miles west of Bolton we have the city of Liverpool with a population of half million, this is one of the largest shipping centers in the world, there are 10 miles of docks on one side the river with an overhead railway running the entire length and a tube railway under the river, to all the towns on the other side. The river is a mile wide. Here can be seen ships and people from every port in the world. We spent a week with relatives in Liverpool and had a most delightful time.

We also were entertained for two weeks at Blackpool, which is one of the largest and most popular coast resorts on the west coast of England, it has 6 miles of esplanade along the water front, which is built of solid concrete, it has 3 iron piers jutting out into the sea each 1/2 a mile in length, handsome Pavilions are built at the end of these in which orchestral concerts and other entertainments are given daily, at a very small charge. There are 2 magnificent buildings on the order of the Casino only very much larger, built of brick each of which has a fine theatre and a beautiful ballroom. In the summer season as many as 100,000 people will visit this place in one day. For the last 3 years before leaving England we resided in a most delightful little place 6 miles south of here.

Almost all the towns and cities of England have municipally owned Street Cars, Water, Gas, and Electricity, and they are all very successful financially and are also very efficient. You can ride quite a distance in all places for 2 cents.

Homeward Bound

We sailed from Liverpool on the S. S. Adriatic. We had a very agreeable and jolly company on board, also a good ships orchestra, that played every morning and night in the dining room. It was a little rougher passage than the one coming to Liverpool and I was seasick for about 2 days. We again held a very good concert, and also had deck sports consisting of races and games of various kinds which were very enjoyable. Owing to the Titanic Disaster all ships had now to take a more southerly course, which increased the passage by one more day.

We arrived in New York early Saturday morning. The ladies who were travelling with us, were detained by the Commissioners, and then sent to Ellis Island, until they could prove evidence of adoption of the little girl they were bringing to the Hangers. We waited about all day for them, and had to leave New York without them by the 7 o'clock train to Montreal.

Soon after leaving the Grand Central Depot, (which will be one of the finest and largest in the world when completed) we passed along The Tenement district of New York. The buildings were solid blocks of flats 7 or 8 stories high perfectly plain in architecture, reminding one of huge warehouses. There were thousands of children playing in the streets. Leaving here we had a very pleasant ride along the banks of the beautiful Hudson river as far as Albany, from here we went direct to Montreal, mostly in the night. Just before arriving in Montreal, we crossed the beautiful St. Lawrence River, on a very fine bridge of considerable length. We stopped over in Montreal all day Sunday, visiting some English friends who now reside there, it is a very fine city, clean good wide streets, and good buildings and stores, pleasantly situated on the banks of the St. Lawrence River. We left Montreal 10:30 Sunday night, on the Imperial Limited for Vancouver, this being the longest run on a line of railroad, owned by a single company in the world, totalling 2898 miles.
